This month's performance vs. S&P 500

Analyst's notes

February was a month marked by the "SaaS-pocalypse."

Innovations in AI had markets afraid that software companies were rapidly becoming a thing of the past, it dragged down the rest of tech, including hardware.

Luckily, we keep spare liquidity (often called dry powder) for just such an occasion.

We reduced our cash position to acquire and increase holdings in tech, most notably Micron. There were also pick ups in defense to prep for an expected supercycle.

Beta has increased and the bond allocation has gotten thin, there may be an appropriate rebalance in the near future.
